Paris.-An extraordinary and quite mespected tribute to the spirit of the French people has been paid by one of the foremost German writers and is apprently accepted by many of the German people as deserved. This appears in the drama "Prisoners of W f." written by Leon Feuchtwanger, lar describe writers of Germany.

The play was written in 1916, in the to 1. The Boston team, unbeaten this we, midst of the war, and it has for year and regarded as perhaps the its hero a French soldier, Gaston Conti, a prisoner of war in Germany, who is made to appear in a most attractive light. By his spiritual charm, his unconstrained courage, his brilliant appearance, by his ardent eloquence in the service of these qualities, he wins the love of a certain Mechthilde.

What is still more notable is that to this heroic and attractive Frenchman the author opposes two other men, who are infinitely less so, and these are Germons. The one is the young girl's father, a Pruslan Junker, stern, hard hearted and narrow minded, to whom prisoners are only machines that must be made to work to their full capacity; the other is Lieutenant Althauss, a brute, who kills the Frenchman with a well-aimed revolver shot because the latter smiled.

The play, of course, was forbidden by the censor. This was at the time when the bothe was bammering at Veryon. The theaters of Lelyz's, of Munich, of the court of Darmstadt. which had made contracts for the production of the play, had to annul them. But the play was published. It even obtained a considerable reading success. Its charm was praised. The erities praised it. And today, despite the offensive curried on by the Francophebe clan, at the head of which is Professor Kach of the chair of history and literature at the Breslau university, the theater lovers want to see it played.

Metaphor flot an Ornament. A metaphor is the result of the search for a precise epithet. It is no more ornamental than a man's Christian name. For most of the things whose quality a writer wishes to conver there are no precise epithets, simply because he is always engaged in discovering their qualities, and, like the chemist, has to invent names for the elements he discovers. Moreover, I suppose, three-quarters of the epithets we have are old metaphors. Try to be precise, and you are bound to be metuphorical; you simply cannot belp establishing affinities between all the provinces of the animate and inanimate world; for the volatile essence you are trying to fix is quality, and in that effort you will inevitably

B. High Pilot Finds Location of Tyre List Cities of Onis and Sitace-May Push Sack History Another Ass.

New Haven, Conn.-Lost cities of ancient civilizations, buried for thousamus of years beneath the shifting rands of Egypt, Mesopotamia and Arable, will soon be located through the use of airplanes, according to Prof. R. A. MacLean of Rochester university, it to staff officer with the British troops in Persia, who discussed this problem before the Archeological Institute of America.

The archeologist, circling shout some 2,000 feet in the air, with a clear sweep of vision for 20 miles in all directions, can make out certain coctinuous lines of depression, indicating ancient irrigation channels, with mounds strewn along these lines indicating buried cities.

Ordinary surveys could never reveal this because of the great distances covered by them. Under the very ground on which countless caratans have passed for more than 5,000 years and where even scientific expeditions may have pitched their camps for the night, lie cities whose contents may push back history another age, whose wegith in gold, silver and precions stones may for surpass anything unearthed even in Egypt.

May Find Lost Cities. An important discovery has already been made by a British pilot, involving possibly the definite location of the lost cities of Opis and Sitarethe famous centers of ancient culture and wealth described by Xenophon 2,500 years and, but never heard of since. The pliot operating last summer in Mesopotamia noticed while on his numerous air reconnaissances what appeared to be a long natural delignment covering many miles.

This depression branched off from the Pigris river at Bagdad, can south a bit, and then curved gradually back to the river, finally running into it at Samarra. Along this depression were many mounds-appearing from above as mere discolorations. Major Beaseley, commanding the air post there, and an enthusiastic archeologist himself, when told of this passed the news on to Professor MacLean, and a series of flights were at once ar-

Paris.-In the nearly nine years mince the war was declared in 1914 the average age of mankind has fallen from fifty-seven to fifty-one, according to statistics compiled by the Dunish professor, Carl Fischer, and read before the French Academy of Sciences.

Not the war directly, but the fact that the war specified un life is the cause for this, asserts blactier.

"Before the automobile became graeral the average age in Europe at which men died was sixty," he said. "Even in 1914 the automobile, while universal, was still not a vehicle for the common people. But now the man who fides on or behind a horse is a rarity, while legs are becoming in-

"There are, of course, other causes for the reduction in the normal life span. They include the growing tendency to degeneracy and looseness of morals to be remarked through the world. This, however, I regard as a consequence of the reign of speed. A man who travels fast lives fast in other ways. He overworks his blood without compensating it by wholesome exercise. "It is deplorable to find this contradictory tendency in the human makeup which will permit him by his own negligence to counteract the labors of doctors and scientists who are giving their lives to his welfare While savants in their laboratories are striving to discover cures and ways of prevention for diseases now takers resonant to the the men nearth rate, the man in the street defeats their object by Hving at such an abnormal rate that his constitution, fearfully overworked, eventually gives up.

PARIS CHEFS ARE STIRRED UP

Deplore "Lack of Taste" in Eating and Plan to Do Something About It.

Paris.-To prevent the decline of the French cuisine and to bring about a return to the great traditions which made it pre-eminent and world-famous, touring associations of France decided to arrange for a special display of cooking, a "week of French cuisine"-not alone a cooking compatition, but an exhibition of foodstuffs. showing the supplies which are the specialties of each province of France (Perigord for truffles, Le Mans for poultry. Normandy for butter, etc.). and which will also advertise the best French vintages. It should have been held already, but some details of the elaborate organization not being complete, the date has been postponed,

The chefs of the leading Paris restaurants approve of the scheme and hope it will revive interest in the forgotten traditions of sound French

Wife's Right to "Frield" Her Hus band's Pockets Is Upheld by New York Court

New York -- If a wife stips her band in hubby's pocket and extracts some Federal Board for Vocational coln therefrom without his knowledge or consent the art does not constitute is breach of law, although it may, of pence. So ruled Judge Rosenwaneer of Lonkers in the case of Mrs. Neille Jurmban who had her bushend, Walter, haled into court on the charge that he struck her because she took $16

m a $36 roll without consulting him. "There is a general understanding that a wife has an incidenable right to take her husband's money if she needs n." Judge Rosenwasser ruled, He told Mrs. Derghan she would have to make a formal complaint against her husband if she wished to press the assault charge.

The couple left the court arm in arm and Deruban was repeating softly to Limself like a lesson well earned: "With all my worldly goods I thee en-

"Your Daily Dentist" Is Here! MU-SOL-DENT

Cleans Without Friction - Cleans Between Teeth - Prevents Tartar and Decay

The new preparation Mu-Sol-dent is aptly called "your daily dentist," because by its daily use your teeth and mouh are given a cleaning, healing and preventative treatment so thorough that nothing can equal it except a visit to your dentist.

Tooth creams, pastes and powders do not clean the cracks and crevices between teeth where decay invariably starts, causing ultimate loss of teeth and poor health. Mu-sor-uent is a inquire channel not only the outer surfaces, but the bidden amake and crevices. It cleans all five sides of every tooth safely and quickly, and does it better than all tooth pastes, powders, and mouth washes combined. It is the first and only preparation to clean safely without friction by dissolving mucin film, gently but thoroughly in the brief time a dentrifice is kept in the mouth. Under this film, germs of decay, unless removed, destroy your teeth and health.

KEEPS AWAY TARTAR

A dentist removes tartar from your teeth; once removed Mu-Sol-dent keeps it away. Eminent dentists testify to this fact. Tartar irritates the gums and makes them bleed. Inflammation and other complications follow. Mu-Sol-dent is the only preparation known to prevent tartar. Try a bottle today.
